Q: Add or remove tasks to a specific day of the week I'm using the.NET Tasks Library and I would like to do something similar to what I did in the code below for a Windows Form. What I'd like to be able to do is to add a task to the task list for one day and remove it from the task list for another day of the week. Is there any way to do this in the Tasks library? // Add task to task list for Day 1 tasks.Add(Tasks.CreateDueTask(new DateTime(2012, 11, 01), "Task 1")); // Remove task from task list for Day 2 tasks.Remove(tasks.ElementAt(0)); A: There is a DayOfWeek property on the Task class, I believe you should be able to get the day of week with DateTime.DayOfWeek and check which is which with ContainsKey: tasks.Add(Tasks.Create

About the Game

Jump Hero: Beginning is a futuristic, procedural platformer. I released the first version last year, without a way to save and edit the levels, and with combat-based classes, and a puzzle-based level editor.

Version 2.0 has been funded on our Patreon account, and brings all of the features I mentioned above, along with the new "habitats" feature and a day/night cycle.

The game is still in development, but I am currently taking a break from working on it, due to exams, so I'd love if you would play it, rate it, and make a review.

On the dev log, I'll try to cover the main changes and the game design.

The built-in solution for save editing from version 2.0 has been paid for out of my own pocket. While it has its limitations, it is the best I could find at the time.

The game plays only one player and is able to play on the portable device, tablet or computer. - Once you choose to play the game, it automatically connects to the game interface, where you do not have to download and install a game, which runs smoothly, perfectly adapting to different devices. - You start with 8 lives. This is the life of the game, which is indicated on the game interface. In order to get more lives, you must collect coins, and more than one difficulty level. - There are three difficulties, and the game consists of 100 levels. Once you complete a level, you are able to continue with the next. - There are three settings in which you can choose the game mode. Depending on the mode, there is a bonus, or the enemies on the game get faster. Once you complete a level, you can choose a new game mode. - If you press the "A" key, the game is going to start. If you press the "B" key, you can replay a level. If you press the "Y" key, you can throw a fireball at the enemy. The game is already in full speed, so pressing these keys will bring you to the game interface and, if you need to, you can interrupt the game in order to enter the game interface. - We have made it so that the game is able to adapt to the size of the portable device, tablet and computer. You can play with the size of the game, ranging from 400x240, 800x480 and 1080p. - The interface can be on the portable device, tablet or computer. Each game mode has its own interface. Depending on the type of device, you can choose the settings you want to play the game on. - The interface has a level control with a number of levels, which can choose to go to where you want, and every time you complete a level, you earn points. Once you have collected a certain number of points, you can choose to go to the next level. - To start a new game you must connect it. This can be done when you are playing in the tournament mode, or during a full game. - In the medal display of the game, there is a record of the best player of each game. - At the moment of writing this article, you can only view the final records, and not see the other players in the game. - You can collect coins with each level that you complete

What's new in Jump Hero: Beginning:

Ninja Jump Hero: Beginning Ninja is a platform game developed and published by Konami for Game Boy Color. It is the first game in the Jump Hero series and acts as a prequel to the sequel: Jump Hero: Silver Hawk. Unlike most Konami characters, it is mostly developed as a Nintendo platform exclusive. Gameplay Upon starting the game, the character has a set number of selections to make. When the player reaches a certain level, the game begins to introduce new gameplay elements, such as the addition of fists, and parrying. Although it is possible to fight while blocking with either a pole or punching and kicking, the fist attacks, which consume one of the main character's special moves, are the most effective attack. Likewise, parrying and blocking are more effective than fist attacks, but they consume the motion ability and are more difficult to execute. Shortcut Keys Every item that must be collected is located on the bottom of the screen. After collecting the specific item for the first time, a letter will appear on that item's bottom indicating a particular number of the shortcut key, which will then unlock the item. Although the shortcut keys can be altered by replacing the keys on the GBC, the GBA automatically unlocks the items when the letter on the bottom matches the letter on the item. Note that: The Play, Select and Start commands remain at three. A Lock will unlock the item after this point.
