"As a sequel, Elden Ring is not an easy game to judge. Even with a name that is a parody of its predecessor,

Elden Ring has very different content, and to be completely frank, the design is the only thing that is the same. Anyway, why do we feel like this? As you would expect of a sequel, it is easy to tell an outline from the previous title. It has a story mode, and it has a "Battles" mode. That is about it for the general setting. The main story, such as the quest, the companions, and the world view, are all different from the first title. Then, its battle system is also different. First, the structure of the battle system is a bit different. The number of times you can use your skill is limited. In addition, the action speed has decreased. Although it is also possible to use a timed-action method, you must make sure to execute it at the exact timing. The setting, the arrival battle, and the chain killing are different from the old system. Finally, the strength of the enemies is weaker than the previous title. Not only in damage, but also in attack speed, magical defense, and even how it increases after a battle. Besides that, it will be interesting to watch a second title with the enemy that makes the progress of the old game a bit troublesome. We recommend that you prepare for the new battle system in particular. Furthermore, I would like to tell you about the graphics. It is a bit poor for the price, but it is a pretty good game. This is not only for the visuals, but also for the battle system. However, the things that seem to not be well-designed are characters. It will be better if you can expect those well designed in the next title. In the new battle system, the game is full of intricate details. In order to solve the difficulty of the game, the enemy is designed to be a level where you cannot afford to allow the situation to get worse. I hope it will be fun to use the new battle system." "I love action games and I love fantasy games, so when I see a game that combines both, I am immediately interested. When I was selecting an RPG that I want to play, it was difficult to choose between those two games. There are many RPG games bff6bb2d33

Every character in the game has an HP gauge, which fills up when you attack enemies and depletes when you use a skill. FIGHT During battle, if your health gauge is completely depleted, you lose, and the enemy wins. When your health gauge is completely refilled, you win. The battle area has a life bar that decreases when you attack enemies and increases when you use a skill. If your health gauge is depleted before the life bar is refilled, you lose. * The life bar and health gauge are updated separately, so they may not be displayed at the same time. How to Attack In order to attack, first use a skill. After you use a skill, your character will enter a "Light" animation. When you and the enemy are in the light animation, and the blue circles appearing in the top right corner overlap, attack. When the circles overlap completely, you attack. The following information can be obtained in battle: * Blue circles overlapping. * Enemy stats. * Enemy data. * Winning or losing conditions. * Skills that have been used.
